Welcome to week 4! As the week begins – the students and our army of volunteers begin their reading groups with children across the school. Good books are meeting grounds. But the meeting ground (the book) is not a limited space; it expands as more students put their minds to it. The reading group means we are all in it together, giving and taking and allowing the book to open up in discussion. ‘I never knew there was so much in it’ stated one parent. This exclamation entirely proves the value of reading groups. My sincere thanks to our hard working teachers and the parent volunteers who assist us in making a difference. We continue to live out our vision – Let’s journey together! Let’s make a difference!
